The turkey supper served by the men of the Congregational Church Wednesday drew the usual crowd. The supper and entertainment were of the customary high standard. PARIS APPLE GROWERS RE-ELECT OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Paris Apple Growers' Association held Saturday, March 10, in the South Paris Fire Hall, the members of last year's board of directors were re-elected as follows: Seward P. Stearns, Ellis Ellingwood, John McKeen, Irving E. Andrews, and Oayma J. Coby. Officers elected from and by the directors were: president, Seward P. Stearns; vice-president, John McKeen; and secretary-treasurer, Oayma J. Coby.

Other matters of business were disposed of and then the possibility of buying spray material and fertilizers through the association was discussed.

George Skinner of A. W. Walker & Son talked to the men relative to spray materials and told of some advantages and disadvantages of group buying. Mr. Sawyer, representing the International Fertilizer Company, then gave an interesting and enlightening talk on the possibilities and limitations of purchasing fertilizer as a group. He discussed the code and explained how it would affect such buying.

From the discussion that took place and questions that were asked and answered, it would seem that the organization might benefit some by pooling the orders of its members and buying in quantity. This would provide a means of starting a fund that would be available for use during packing season this fall.

MRS. JOSEPHINE K. BLAKE

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Josephine Kimball Blake, Feb. 21, 1934, in Los Angeles, California.

Mrs. Blake has been in very poor health for several years but suffered a shock February 14 from which she failed to rally. She is survived by two daughters, Josephine Blake and Mrs. Alice Records; two sons, Henry and Don, several grand children, all of California; one sister, Mrs. Mabel K. Bean of Bellows Falls, Vermont; and one brother, B. W. Kimball of Bethel, Maine.

PEOPLE INTERESTED

IN NEW PROJECT

Miss Edna Cobb, State Home Management Specialist, was well pleased at the reception accorded her in Bethel on March 4, when 30 men and women braved icy roads to hear her discuss "The Maine Tourist Home." Four women came all the way from Upton and one from Rumford. The program included some very lovely colored pictures showing exterior and interiors of successful tourist homes in all sections of the country. Pictures of bed rooms, living rooms, and kitchens showed the high standards of convenience and beauty which can be had with the expenditure of small amounts of money. After the pictures the audience discussed with Miss Cobb some of their problems. Meetings on this subject are being held only in Knox-Lincoln and Oxford Counties.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

A surprise party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Miller at their home on Main Street in honor of Eleanor Vail's fifteenth birthday on March 11th. Twelve friends were present. A pleasant evening was spent in playing games, after which ice cream and cake were served.

The Waite claim that their daughter Clara, aged 5, was struck by a car driven by Blaboe and sustained cuts, bruises and a fractured pelvis. They contend that the child was struck and carried 43 feet on the bumper, and that at this point on the Canton-Gilbertville road, a driver's vision is clear for 1,500 feet.

VILLAGE CORP. TO RAISE MORE MONEY

New Assessors, Collector, Auditor and Engineer Elected Unanimously

The annual meeting of the Bethel Village Corporation was altogether a very peaceful scene Monday evening. Each officer was elected unanimously, in several cases one ballot being cast by the Clerk, while with one exception the appropriations followed the recommendations of the Assessors.

Although he was re-elected when one ballot was cast by the Clerk at the request of the voters, Ernest F. Bisbee declined to serve as First Assessor. Mr. Bisbee has served in this capacity for the past 10 years, but had previously declared that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

Harry E. Jordan, who has served as Second Assessor, was then elected to the first place, with John P. Butts and Eugene A. Van Den Kerkhoven as second and third respectively. Milo McAllister is the new Fire Engineer, and the new Tax Collector, Walter E. Bartlett, made the bid of 1½ per cent and this rate was established. L. W. Ramsell was returned to be Park Commissioner for another three years.

The money to be raised follows usual lines although the total is several hundred dollars over last year's. The sum for miscellaneous expenses was set at $350 instead of $150 recommended, as Mr. Bisbee said it would be necessary to re-roof the ell of the upper Corporation building, and H. C. Rowe expressed the belief that the rooms in this building occupied by the American Legion should be connected with the sewer. It was voted to pay for the bonds of the Treasurer and Collector.

PITY THE POOR PEDESTRIAN

Pity the poor pedestrian in the great American traffic tangle.
Dodging, slipping, cont-talis flying,
he continues annually to account for nearly half of all our automobile accident fatalities.

Pity him not only because speeding careless, brakeless, light-beating motorists cut him down without mercy, invade his street safety zones, and slaughter him as he steps from street cars and busses—but pity him also because his own stupidity remains his unrestrained enemy. He still crosses streets against traffic signals, walks along the wrong side of rural highways with his back to traffic, plays in the street, and in the most flagrant jay-walker in the world. In this last capacity, he crosses between intersections, invites highway murder by coming out from behind parked cars, and makes himself a pot-shot target by crossing diagonally at intersections. Pity him because last year 13,440 out of a total of 25,000 persons killed in traffic accidents according to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, were members of his clan.
One in three, or 33%, were jay walkers. The foot traveler is apparently the product of a horse and buggy age who cannot master the rules of a motorized era. His species, as such, may soon be extinct, for his children, happily, are worlds safer. They have learned that playing tag with high-powered cars is a futile game. They cross at designated cross walks, wait for the signal light, and walk on the left-hand side of the road, facing traffic.
Pity the poor pedestrian, but drive reckless, killer-type motorists from the road!

The average portion which each man, woman and child owes for Federal and local government debts, totals about $300, or approximately $1,200 for every family of four. Repayment of principal and interest comes out of earnings of every citizen and industry.

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

By R. M. Hofer

I was feeling particularly depressed after reading the morning paper at breakfast—murders, scandals, the air mail imbroglio, wars threatened, the dollar of uncertain value, stock market shaky and the worried citizen facing the greatest taxes and the greatest Federal debt in history—when in came four young people, past voting age.
"Is him married this morning?"
asked all four.

Better Move Over on the Trail, Mister!

"Who in the world is Blm?" said

"Benjamin Gump," said they.
And, lo and behold, the thing they were most interested in was whether Benjamin Gump and his lovely little sweetheart of the comic strip were safely wedded.
And there I was worrying about the condition of the country.

I decided that as long as the young people and voters had such a sense of humor, the man-made troubles of our nation would probably be solved in due course and in spite of the politicians, speculators and war promoters.

And in line with the foregoing, I ran across the new book by Arthur J. Burks, entitled, "Where Are My People?"

Burks was raised in the West and lives in the East. He has written a simple straightforward narrative, which is as unmistakably American as doughnuts and apple pie.
Through the history of one family the author's own—we see the virgin land transformed into profitable farming and thriving towns in the "Big Bend" country of Washington.
The book is about real people such as have been responsible for this nation's growth from the beginning. They have carried on through thick and thin, through hard times and good times and in spite of every brand of political experiment.

Would-be statesmen and hard-working citizens should read the book to understand the real forces that develop the country and carry on to greater achievements.
It will take the conceit out of politicians to realize the importance of the Gumps.

BABY CHICKS RETURN GREATEST PROFITS

By E. D. Griffin, Formerly Extension Poultryman Purdue University

If we stop to consider the primary reason for raising chicks each year, we will soon realize the importance of getting the baby chicks at an early date. Probably no less than 90% of all baby chicks hatched are produced with one idea
—pullet layers at maturity.

It is, therefore, advisable that consideration be given the important question of the best time to procure the baby chicks. When do we want egg production from the pullets? The answer should be—at the time of the year when egg prices are the highest.

For many years market figures on egg prices have shown that the fall and early winter months command the best prices for eggs. November is usually the peak month, with October, December, September and January following in about that order. The reason for higher egg prices during these months is smaller supply due to lower production. Good hens that have gone through a year's production are normally in molt and low production at this season. Hence, production must come largely from the pullets.

In order to get profitable production from pullets in October, November and December, the pullets must be started at a time that will allow them to mature and be on the job when prices are highest.
For the light breeds five to six months will be necessary to get 40 to 50% production and desirable egg size. For heavy breeds four to six weeks additional time will be necessary.

Many successful poultrymen plan to get their heavy-breed chicks during the period from March 1st to April 15th and chicks of the light breeds from April 1st to May 15th. Thus they assure themselves of pullet production when production means most in dollars and cents.

The program just suggested has one other feature that is often overlooked. Half of the chicks will be cockerels that need to be disposed of as broilers. The earlier the chicks are started, the better will be the income from the cockerels sold as broilers, because they can be sold before the heavy supply reaches the markets and causes the price to decline.

The 1933 potato crop in Maine has been estimated at 42,000,000 bushels, an increase of 1,540,000 bushels of the estimation for 1932.
The total apple crop was estimated at 1,834,000 bushels, 27 per cent less than the crop of 1932.

New "Knee-Action" Chevrolet Gives Passengers Ride Like a Glide

In the design and development of the new 1934 Chevrolet, particular attention has been given to driver and passenger comfort, all annoying sensations of disagreeable sound and feeling having been eliminated. The upper photo shows the new Chevrolet coach with its long, sleek lines. Wind rush has been eliminated by the Fisher No Draft Ventilator and the new streamlined bodies. Chevrolet's "Knee-Action" wheels enjoy the advantage of being completely enclosed in a weather-tight housing the coil springs and shock absorbers ride in a bath of oil. William E. Holler, Chevrolet's general sales manager, is shown at the left holding a chart which shows the internal construction of the system. The radiator of the new car has added beauty through its graceful and sharply pointed design. Smartness has been the theme in every line of this year's Chevrolet.

The driver and passengers in the new 1934 Chevrolet get a ride like the glide of an airplane. One of the main factors in improving the riding qualities of the new car to such a great extent is the "Knee-Action"—or inde- pendently sprung front wheels, to use the technical term. So much has been written about independent spring- ing that the public has doubtless concluded that it is something too technical to understand. As a matter of fact, there is nothing complicated about either the principle involved or the construction of the system. Chevrolet's "Knee-Action" enjoys the advantage of being enclosed in a welded weather-tight housing in which the entire spring mechanism and shock absor- rs ride up and down in a bath of oil. An automobile gives a perfect ride when both the ont and rear springs have the same "frequency," or nison. Actually this has been impossible to carry out the past because the front springs had to be over vice as "stiff" as the rear springs in order to hold the ont axle, wheels and brakes in place. In independent, springing, the wheels and spring mechanism are rigidly attached directly to the frame and there is no front axle. By relieving the front springs of the task of carrying wheels and axle, therefore, it became possible to make the front springs as "soft" as the rear springs. When the new Chevrolet strikes an irregularity in the road, both front and rear move up and down with the same frequency—there is no inclination on the part of the rear end of the car to leap into the air and throw the passengers forward and upward. Chevrolet's "Knee-Action" has additional advantages all contributing to a comfort in riding never before thought possible in a motor car. There is a decided improvement in handling, steering, safety at high speeds and tire economy. In design, the front spring is a neat, compact and efficient unit, as Mr. Holler points out in the above picture. The entire spring mechanism is attached rigidly to the frame. From this enclosed unit the wheels spring vertically at the ends of strong, steel horizontal arms.

CHAPTER XI

IT HAD been proposed by Doctor White that they all might save themselves unnecessary argument and discord if they were to postpone discussion of their legal, moral and other claims to whatever might be salvaged from the Fourquet, until such time as they might be able to estimate the value of such salvage, if any, and its character. He had admitted freely to count de Corlay and Robert that they were, in his opinion, entitled to a due share of any property that might be proved to have belonged to their ancestor, personally and incontestably. Doctor White made it clear that he could not consider such to be booty that might have been taken from enemy ships and therefore subject to estimate and fair division as spoils of war.

The De Corlays, pere et fils, were obliged to be content with this, the point being incontestable. Doctor White had clearly defined their position when he said, "Your own efforts, gentlemen, had nothing whatever to do with my ward's discovery of the position of the wreck. That was made before she knew anything about you or your presence here. Mr. Jordan already had made preparations for his search. He was working on a wrong theory, and Miss Poole, knowing this, would have hastened to prove the location if only to save him useless effort and expense. But we admit freely that your presence here, and what you told us, led to our deciding that there was no time to lose, and acting accordingly."

When the count seemed disposed to take up this point, Doctor White continued, "As I see it, your most considerable claim is that your son entered into an agreement of partnership with Mr. Jordan, when both of them managed by methods that were high handed but justified, I think, in disposing of Sebastian. If it had not been for their action there is no telling what might have happened. Miss Poole and I recognized that fact most fully, and all persons interested, by causing a copy of this order to be published three weeks successively in the Oxford County Citizen a newspaper published at Bethel, in said County, that they may appear at a Probate Court to be held at said Paris, on the third Tuesday of March, A. CHAPTER XI

IT HAD been proposed by Doctor White that they all might save themselves unnecessary argument and discord if they were to postpone discussion of their legal, moral and other claims to whatever might be salvaged from the Fourquet, until such time as they might be able to estimate the value of such salvage, if any, and its character. He had admitted freely to count de Corlay and Robert that they were, in his opinion, entitled to a due share of any property that might be proved to have belonged to their ancestor, personally and incontestably. Doctor White made it clear that he could not consider such to be booty that might have been taken from enemy ships and therefore subject to estimate and fair division as spoils of war.

The De Corlays, pere et fils, were obliged to be content with this, the point being incontestable.

Doctor White had clearly defined their position when he said, "Your own efforts, gentlemen, had nothing whatever to do with my ward's discovery of the position of the wreck. That was made before she knew anything about you or your presence here. Mr. Jordan already had made preparations for his search. He was working on a wrong theory, and Miss Poole, knowing this, would have hastened to prove the location if only to save him useless effort and expense. But we admit freely that your presence here, and what you told us, led to our deciding that there was no time to lose, and acting accordingly."

When the count seemed disposed to take up this point, Doctor White continued, "As I see it, your most considerable claim is that your son entered into an agreement of partnership with Mr. Jordan, when both of them managed by methods that were high handed but justified, I think, in disposing of Sebastien. If it had not been for their action there is no telling what might have happened. Miss Poole and I recognize that fact most fully, and desire to give it full credit. But you must yourself agree that it gives Mr. Jordan quite as strong a moral claim as any of us have."

The count looked thoughtful at this, but voiced no protest. He was sensible enough to see that legally he had scarcely any claim at all; and in any case that litigation would have been so involved as to seem hopeless. There were also other considerations of which he was indisposed to speak.

Sebastien had taken himself off, back no doubt to the safer and more profitable traffic of rum running. In this he was wise, for not only could the charge of sabotage be brought against him but there were four creditable persons prepared to swear that he had been about to commit a murderous assault with a lethal weapon, when interrupted. Sebastien must have realized that there was little chance of his recovering anything for the sinking of his cruiser. Tom might have claimed an accidental collision in the fog, in which case he could have been held responsible only to the value of his boat, this not worth much after her ramming maneuver.

Mike arrived in due course, and went about his operations with the skilled assistance of Tom and Robert. A section of the Fourquet's side was dynamited, and a number of articles interesting to the antiquarian recovered. The diver gained access to what evidently had been the quarters of the commanding officer, but failed to discover anything of much intrinsic worth. He found some pieces of silver plate and drinking cups and a handsome punch bowl. Then he reported three small cannon of the culverin sort, but not as long as was customary in such guns of the sixteenth century, which Doctor White thought from the description would have been the epoch of their casting.

According to honest Mike, these unmounted guns evidently had been held in reserve, down on the keel, where they contributed to serve as ballast. When the Fourquet turned turtle they either had crashed through the decks, or smashed through later from their weight, finally to come to rest on a main beam of the spar deck, that was on bottom.

The count de Corlay and Doctor White were both out aboard the diver's yawl when this report was made, and the agitation of the count, though contained in a masterly manner, did not escape the keen observation of the doctor. Not unnaturally, for Mike's English was crude, the count interrogated him in his native Portuguese. But this did not prevent Doctor White from arriving at his own conclusions. He was more and more convinced that the bore of these guns contained something of interest not only to the collector of antiquities, but to the collector of cold cash.

"Let's get those guns up and aboard," he said.

Mike shook his head. "Dem ting too dam' heavy, sir. S'pose we try lift 'em board, da tackle bust."

"Could you get them up along side?" Tom asked.

"I guess so, boss. Don't take a much to lift 'em in da water."

"Then go down and rig a chain strop on one of them and we will drift it over to the beach at high water," the doctor advised. "We can handle them from there."

This accordingly was done. But even then Tom, who was bawling the job of hoisting, trembled for his gear. Looking over the side as the gun came near awash he was surprised to find it no larger. The yawl must, he thought, be tender for this piece of ordnance, less its specific gravity, to give her such a heel. It was not a very ornate cannon, as were many of its epoch, and it seemed to be covered with some sort of gummy slime rather than the tarnish of verdigris that one might have expected.

The tide was flowing in at this moment, about three-quarters high, as it was time to knock off for midday dinner they decided to wait until after their meal, then float the cannon over to the beach when it might be examined at leisure later in the day. This program was carried out, accordingly, when Doctor White, although finding it repugnant to suspect a French officer and gentleman for whom he had conceived a sincere liking and respect, still kept a wary eye on the spot where that gun had been deposited.

The two others were handled in like manner, Tom towing the yawl into the little cove behind the battered launch, for the damage to which he had insisted on making full indemnity. Then, when the twelve feet drop of tide had left the pieces of ordnance high and the interested little throng of spectators had departed for their respective suppers, the treasure hunters went over to examine what did not seem to provide any great remuneration for their toil, expense and incidental danger.

There were only the five of the actively interested. Aunt Martha had sniffed at this poor find and returned to the more important detail of supper. Mike had chugged over to town. Doctor White, walking down the hard shingle with the count, stood looking at the guns reflectively.

"Odd that they should be so foul," he observed. Tom leaned down and scraped at the gummy coating with his knife's edge. It was displaced to show a brassy gleam beneath, at which Tom scratched with the point of the blade, that scurred it very slightly. "Looks like pure brass," he said. "A little dull for our kind, but about as hard. Wonder what this gummy stuff was for. It isn't sea slime. More like wax, or rubber."

The count cleared his throat. He was pale, and his hand trembled a little on his malacca stick. "For many years," he said truthfully enough, "gunners have had the habit of covering their ordnance with such a preparation when they are not required to keep them polished."

Doctor White tapped the mouth of the gun sharply with the iron tip of his own stick. It gave a dull bell note. Then, deliberately, he shoved his cane into the muzzle and along to where it fetched up at the breach, laying off the depth on the outside of the piece. Calmly, he repeated this measuring of the other two. All three were the same, and all three were empty, even of the weed or shell or any other sediment that might have been expected of their long immersion.

If this examination suggested anything to the minds of count de Corlay or his son, their expressions gave no hint of it. As for Doctor White, he could have found it in his heart to be glad his inspection had nothing to reveal. It would have pained him to discover that these distinguished Frenchmen were capable of sordid deceit, if such indeed it could have been considered. But not only was the doctor relieved, in a sense he was also puzzled. It seemed to him that he had felt a tension in the air from the moment of Mike's description of these guns, and that this tension had steadily increased.

"Well," said Tom shortly, "at least they are not duds." The count slowly shook his head. He looked as if suddenly taken ill. "No," he drew a deep breath, "they are not—duds—" his voice trailed off into a sort of attenuated whisper. "They—ere—not duds."

THE CHILDREN HAVE GONE TO SCHOOL

The dog stands watching by the gate,
The cat skulks at the door,
The ball bat rests in a careless place,
And the mitten lies on the floor.

The fish-pole lies on the coal-house roof,
The kite hangs on the wall near by,
The stilts stand there by the open door
And the bathing suit's hung up to dry.

The hammock swings idly in the breeze,
Their book now neglected lies,
The dolls in their beds are laid away,
And the dishes they used for mud pies.

The banners are folded and laid away,
And the skirt she trailed around,
As happy children they passed the days
With the pleasures and joys they found.

But vacation is over and now to work,
No idling on lawn or in pool,
The mind must be trained for the duties that come,
The children have gone to school.

The days and the weeks are passing by,
As fast as the clock,
The months and years soon follow on,
Soon the homes no children know.

The joyous laughter is missed to-day,
And the childish griefs and woes,
But lonelier still are the homes we see,
That no voices of children know.

THE SECRET OF CONTENT

It isn't what a fellow has that clothes him with content,
That puts him in that frame of mind where joy and peace are blent,
And makes him feel that recompensed are those who plan and strive;
That he's in truth, well satisfied, and glad that he's alive.

It isn't money stored in banks there placed to his account,
It isn't mortgages he holds of fabulous amount;
Nay, none of these sheathe the worry's thorns as down life's path we jaunt,
It isn't what a fellow has, but what he doesn't want!

Though wandering feet may be a curse, far more than itching hands,
That grasp, but never satisfy, their cravings and demands,
Though rolling stones accumulate but very little moss,
They don't, like avaricious palms, keep smarting at their loss.

And so, the man of modest wants, who keeps his desires curbed, Strolls side by side with happiness when others walk perturbed,
Possessions ne'er make man immune from cares that siege or haunt—
It isn't what a fellow has, but what he doesn't want.

Refunding Bonds

The process of refunding means the exchange of a new debt obligation for an old one. When for example a government is unable to repay money borrowed from the bond holders on the date repayment is due, it may issue new bonds and exchange them for the old ones, or sell them to obtain cash to pay off the maturing obligations. This is frequently done by railroads and other private corporations which regard their bonds as representing a portion of the capital employed in their business. Lutz Public Finance states that public debt which represents capital invested in reproductive commercial undertakings may properly enough be refunded from time to time in this way, while there is a disapproval of the general practice of refunding the mass of public debt which represents outlays for nonproductive purposes.

Termite Queen Lays Many Eggs

The termite queen, from a small insect one-eighth inch in length, gradually increases in size as the colony grows and food becomes abundant, until in some cases she reaches the size of a small potato, or more than three inches in length. At this stage she is fed entirely by the workers. The termite queen is the champion of all forms of life in reproduction. Termite queens have been known to produce eggs at the rate of 90 a minute for long periods, or at the rate of 88,400 a day. This enables the termite colony to wreak such extensive damage so quickly after becoming once established. The termite is a wood-eater and lives on and digests cellulose. Certain animals, such as the goat and the moose, can digest cellulose owing to certain secretions in their stomach juices.

Holiest Monks' Retreat

Inaccessible retreats once inhabited by "the holiest monks" have been unearthed in the desert sand some ten miles from the Wadi Natrun, Egypt. The traveler, who carried out the excavations, claims to have located the site of the hitherto undiscovered district of Cellia, where early Christian monks lived so far apart they could neither see nor hear one another. The only occasions on which they met were on Saturdays and Sundays, when they assembled at the church—a central building which this authority claims to have identified about ten miles from the northwest corner of the Wadi Natrun.

First Gas Cars

The modern automobile was a development of the gasoline internal combustion engine invented by Otto in 1876. Carl Benz of Mannheim, Germany, built the first gasoline-propelled vehicles in 1885 and 1886, but these were tricycles or motorcycles rather than automobiles; two years later Panhard and Levassor bought the French rights and built a gasoline-operated motor car. According to some authorities, in 1875 Siegfried Markus, an Austrian, built a four-wheeled vehicle powered by an internal combustion engine.

Uncle Sam Paid France

France received from the United States all of the money which was borrowed during the time of the American Revolution. This debt was discharged between 1791 and 1795 by money borrowed in Holland. The latter debt was finally paid Holland in the early part of the Nineteenth century. The money borrowed from France was borrowed between the years 1778 and 1782. The interest on these loans was forgiven until 1783, and in fact little interest was paid until 1790.—Washington Star.

Some Acorns Edible

The general use of the acorn as an article of food has long since ceased, but back in ancient days it was an important article of food. In fact, it was considered that eating the acorn added years to a man's life and great strength to his muscles. Indians of the New England regions formerly ate the acorn of certain types of white oaks, while the sweet acorn of the California white oak is still ground into a coarse flour used in bread. Over in England the people of the rural communities bordering on the royal forests have the right every fall to turn their pigs loose in the woodlands in order that they may grow fat on the fallen acorns.—Washington Star.
